Professional Julibirds. The French are a practical people For many years it has been the cusom for the more explosive Parisian editors to keep a "ghost" around the forner. Generally the "ghost" is sipging absinthe at the nearest cafe, But he is the titular editor. And when the paper falls foul of the authorities and the editor has to go to jail it is the ghost around the corner that goes. The scheme is convenient. Justice is satisfied, and the paper comes out as usual.

There is an established bureau in the Rue Druot with a register and a ariff for the supply of "doubles" for wealthy citizens who are averse o hard labor. It does a very thriving business and does not limit its resources to eatering solely for the equirements of newspaper men. Any gay young dude who falls foul of the police can by a little judicious squaring send round to the bureau or a substitute, who for $1 a day, payable in advance, will take his lace in prison and do the allotted ime meted out for venal offenses. For higher grades of punishment the tariff is a little more and usually comprises an extra sum of $10 for a new suit of clothes upon release from jail.—Paris Letter.

The Stupid Ostrich.

While the ostrich has absolutely no brain-see Job for authority-it has vicious propensities that show some sort of wicked intelligence. Some Cape Town people had a fowl fatting in a special coop near an os-trich kraal. The bird drooped and to peer through the slats of its coop, curious to watch its neighbors, the by heroic effort. ostriches. Every time it put its head out it received a kick from its neighbor and would soon have died had it not been removed.

A meek looking male ostrich stood about with its consort looking so dejected that some visitors remarked 'Eully for nihil.' The crowd yelled it must be henpecked.

False Dice.

The following passage explains the various methods of cheating at dice in the Elizabethan era so well that I transcribe it in full for the benefit of commentators on old plays, etc., says whereat the young man nodded at a correspondent of London Notes proval. "What parts do you take?" and Queries. "What false dise use they? as dise stopped up with quicksilver and heares, dise of vauntage, flattes, gourdes to chop and chaunge whan they lyste, to lette the trew dise fall under the table, and so take up the false, and if they be true dise, what shyfte will they make to set ye one of them with slyding, with cogging, with foysting, with coytinge, as they call it."-Ascham's "Toxophilus," 1545.

The Husband's Lament.

After a conjugal scene the wife gave the husband a slap in the face. Instead of flying into a passion the husband very composedly took up his hat, and before going away spoke as follows:

"Madame, six years ago, when I solicited your parents for your hand, I little suspected the use you would make of it."—Petit Rouennais.

Women travel abroad nowadays with a mania for one article collections. A fortunate individual comes home laden with several dozen lamps of every size and shape, from the thickest brass affairs picked up in Holland to the daintiest filigree silver day routine life that comes after ncense burners.

A New York tenant who had a grudge against his landlord began the habit of paying his rent of $30 a month all in pennies, but the land-lord complained to the courts, and the courts have stopped the practice.

Pranzini wrote at the last moment to a priest, "The consciousness of my innocence inspires me with the desire to have recourse to your functions in order to console myself for what is called the justice of man."

It is bad form for any person to use toilet articles that are not his own. The objectionable habit is most trying to others and shows lamentable ignorance on the part of the

Why the Collegian Stopped. "Out in California in the early days of the war," said Judge Wallace of San Francisco in an up town hotel, "there was a good deal of restless ness and a feverish impatience on the part of the people that something de-cisive should be done. Everybody chafed at what seemed like paralysis on the part of the government, and the phrase 'masterly inactivity' was not to be heard. We wanted a bold, aggressive policy, we people of the slope, and were fretting like a net tled charger. Public meetings were of frequent occurrence, and oratory was at a premium.

"I shall never forget one of these assemblages, where the speaker of the day was a young fellow fresh from an eastern college and sur charged with Greek and Latin quo tations. He hadn't got very far along with his address when he lugged in grew thin. It was watched and seen an old Roman saw that freely trans lated meant nothing is done excep

"'Nihil fit,' he began, and then re peated the words with great emphs sis, 'mhil fit,' but that was as far a he got, for at this point a burly fe Bully for mail, and the collegia

"Eh?-eh?-children's?" gasped the interviewer.

"Why, no," said the applicant in surprised tone, "the young lover."
"Oh, yes, yes," assented the other, smiling, "that's just it. Are you open for an engagement-I might say several engagements-for the summer? "I am." was the hearty answer.

"At, say, $25 a week and all expenses?" "Well," returned the stage lover,

"I should say so. Are-are"-the tone implied mingled hope and doubt 'are you a manager?"

"I am," said the elder, beaming, "and I'll take you until the 1st of October. All that you will have to do is to act your regular part, and you may fill several engagements. I am a summer hotel manager."-Harper's Bazar.

A Pica For Small Attentions If men only knew how much their wives appreciate the little attentions that they consider too small to think about, there would be more of the courtesies that marked the antenup tial period manifested in the every-

A man, when he has succeeded in winning a woman, calmly lays aside all those delightful little ways that, if he only knew it, did so much to captivate her, and with the air of a man who has run after a street car he settles down and reads his paper without having an idea that she is eating her heart out because of the absence of those trifling attentions that mean so much to her.

Listen, all ye men, to a wife who knows how much woman's nature is alike and how happy we all become over little kindnesses that may not in your eyes be worth considering, but which to us speak of a sentiment that has not died out in marriage and a polite regard for the wife that is as great as that shown the flances.— Philadelphia Times.
